1. Magazine Publication Report

Since its inception in 2020, the Geography Department of Dinhata College has been successfully publishing its annual magazine, “Uttorer Vugol o Poribesh”. This publication serves as a vibrant platform for students to showcase their academic and fieldwork experiences, allowing them to explore and express their knowledge of geography in creative and engaging ways.

Each year, all department students actively participate, contributing articles and reports on a wide array of topics. The magazine highlights local landforms, environmental issues, and comprehensive reports on field visits. These contributions reflect the students' growing understanding of geographical concepts and the relevance of these issues to the local community. The magazine not only allows students to develop their writing and research skills but also fosters a sense of collaboration, encouraging them to work together on various projects. It has become an essential part of the department's academic and cultural activities, helping students bridge the gap between theoretical knowledge and real-world geographical phenomena.

Key Features:

- Local Landform Studies: Each issue includes insightful articles focusing on the unique landforms of the region, helping readers understand the geomorphological characteristics and their impact on local livelihoods.
- Environmental Awareness: Several contributions address pressing environmental concerns, from climate change to local conservation efforts, aiming to promote sustainability in the region.
- Field Visit Reports: Detailed field visit reports, where students describe their firsthand experiences of exploring diverse landscapes, interacting with local communities, and analyzing geographical data.

The magazine continues to grow each year, contributing significantly to the academic enrichment of students and enhancing the department's reputation within and beyond the college.
